

Indian companies can watch from cheap balcony seats or they can beat China.

It is reshuffling of the entire deck of cards in global scene - humanity, jokers and all.

The world is imploding all around us, one country after the other is struggling to balance a full plate of foreign policy crisis in nearly every corner of the plate, from US and Russia in Syria to India and Pakistan in Asia or Japan with North Korea. Post Brexit national self interest and self preservation has hijacked frightened mindsets.

Will Indian companies remain relevant to new emerging global economy borders and realignment or become an afterthought? PEOPLE are killing each other in extraordinary numbers across the world over ancient religious belief that have been barbarically perverted and distorted, this will likely relegate Indian Govt and business community to a cheap balcony seat from which all they can do is watch. Our over dependence on US from govt to IT is not getting it that US is undergoing a considerable ideological shift that is shackling the country to its core, this is nothing like 1960's, it is more severe and it is technology driven, blinking and beeping all day long on smartphones and not once in 24 hours view news papers.

India is divided politically - that the country is moving to both left and right simultaneously- the prized "CENTER" of the spectrum is dissolving as demographic undergo grinding metamorphosis that would make a cockroach pale in comparison.

If you notice very carefully US has essentially excused itself from the dinner table and never quite returned from the restroom, Russia has taken its seat at the Dias and is aggressively reassertion itself on the world stage as it takes advantage of the integrated Europe and disinterested US. Middle East has given birth to a pair of grossly disfigured children like IS & AQ, out of control organisations, then there is Iran, the big bad pugnacious bully in classroom and in all this no one is paying attention that our friendly neighbourhood China began constructing faux islands in the middle of Pacific to further solidify its position as the proverbial gorilla in the room, today no one wants to pick a fight with them and we forgot about the colourful joker Kim Jongun of North Korea with his jittery finger on the nuke could CHANGE any equation of business and economy. Europe is flat out disintegrated and it's anyone's guess what crumbs will be left on the bottom of the plate when all said and done.

The whole world is grinding and shifting like earth's tectonic plates and the Indians' well being could be taken to a back seat than everyone else. It may not be in conversation when you have Kim, ISIS, Iran, Trump, Brexit all around.

From our allies (ASEAN, US, Afghanistan) we will get policy driven lip service when China is picking up country after country in Africa which has double GDP than Europe and one of the fastest growing economies, today when China gets cold Africa gets pneumonia as Europe and USA are busy in their own domestic and foreign policy issues, China has taken over entire continent.

Sooner or later the Indian Government and business community will have to be enough for themselves and rely less on others because at some point in the near future we will risk losing significance among peers as the world becomes more tenuous.

By being forced to carry more of its own weight, India can start to wean itself off its allies good grace and over time develop a functioning, well governed and have supportive policies without which a country can not sustain its current course indefinitely. I am not saying they become the East India company but yes, strong support is must for business so rather than paying to Bhutan, Nepal and Bangladesh (which is important strategically) make India strong first, charity begins at home specially when you have a strong and dedicated leader like Modi on driving seat, he already touched bases with almost the entire world - let him now ask each country a favour for one Indian industry , not much . But for this he requires support for him from his own team ,home(India) over religion, region ,water and everything else – just take a break and first make the country strong, then you may start your fight again , and why does the Government alone needs to do this ? When the private sector can support the Government in cleaning India, promoting education and sanitation why not in supporting them to make India one ? Even your business will benefit to have strike free , riot free situations where people won't burn buses bought by their own tax money ,where all the energy is channelled to use the current situation to the advantage of india.

India will need to do all for herself ,provide for herself , take responsibility, Govern, support business , act selfish but with dignity and grow because that's really not a bad thing at all.
